Genre-Based Evaluation of Persian Translated Version of Carranza's Clinical Periodontology: The Case of Recipients' Attitude

Kadkhodazade, mostafa

Reza Biria

裳The participants of this study were 15 teachers and 85 students in this field. To achieve the attitude of recipients, a questionnaire that contained of two parts was used and the data was analyzed by means of SPSS. The results showed that all the recipients had positive attitudes to Persian translated version of this book and as most of the recipients moderately accepted translated version of this book, it become clear that this kind of evaluation was success to present a reliable prediction of the quality of Persian translated version of this book.